Biennial Echoes

The San Francisco Chronicle says: "The first mass meeting in the interest of the biennial of the General Federation of Women's club of the United States, which will meet in this ity from June 25 to July 5 to the extent of 5000 persons, was held in the Palace hotel yesterday afternoon, and the club women who made up the mass were informed as to the extent of the preparations by the local biennial board. The local biennial board, having met many times per week since last sum-mer, considerable has been done, and, according to the report and to the feminine propensity for changing the mind, not a little has been undone. A notable undoing was the changing of the name of the meeting place of the biennial for the third time, and as there are still several weeks between the date of the last christening and the opening of the convention, nobody is inclined to regard seriously the latest term of identification. From the "Pavilion skating rink" to the "Sutter street pavilion" was the initial step in the evolution of the building on Sutter and Pierce streets, where the 5000 elub women will convene, and yesterday the second stage in its advancement was reached by an entreaty that the place be known as "Convention hall." And how it may be designated a month hence has not yet been suggested.

"Another notable evidence of the life in further proof of the local biguing and it was a matter of special comment that the club so contribute all the pine cones to be used in the decorations; and it was a matter of special comment that the club so contributing to the biennial was not an outdoor art of the biennial was not an outdoor art of the study of Shakespeare, which fact was felt to be in further proof of the elasticity of the feminine mind.

"The mass meeting was called to or der by the president of the local biguing and what is not provided favorable mention because of one of the northern clubs having recently sent in the mount, having been asked to contribute $500 and baving recently sent in the mount, having been asked to contribute $500 and baving recently sent in the mount, having been asked to contribute $500 and baving recently sent in the mount, having been asked to contribute all the pine one of the northern clubs having promised to contribute all the pine one of the northern clubs having promised to contribute all the pine one to be used in the decorations; and it was a matter of special comment that the club so contribute all the pine one to be used in the decorations; and it was a matter of special comment that the club so contribute all the pine one to be used inine propensity for changing the mind, not a little has been undone. A no-nated a month hence has not yet been suggested.

'Another notable evidence of the mutability of the feminine mind was given when Mrs. Mary Bates McClellan, the artistic decorator, was called upon to make her report, and announced that she was not going to do one of the things that she said she would do last February, but had planned something entirely different. Her explanation of this change in her artistic conception of the evolution of a skating rink into a convention hall, she said, was the rink itself. And the change occurred, she continued to explain, because whenever she looked at the rink and endeavored to form a mental picture of the hall, the 'subject got away
